

Columbia Law School Adjunct Faculty and Academic Fellows Expense Policy 2022-2023 Academic Year

Student Enrichment Allocation

Adjuncts and Academic Fellows are afforded an allocation per enrolled student per semester for purposes of academic enrichment and relationship building with students. The allocation also covers the instructor and all teaching and research assistants assigned to the course. Adjuncts may use the allocation to have a meal with small groups of their students during the semester; however, lunch should not exceed $25 per person, and dinner should not exceed $35 per person, excluding tax and tip.

Alternatively, Adjuncts and Academic Fellows may choose to host a party for the entire class, but the total cost of the event, excluding tax and tip, should not exceed $35 per person.

Letters of Credit

Meals at select local restaurants may be charged to the Law School by using a letter of credit. Adjuncts may request a letter of credit by sending an email to the Secretariat at secretariat@law.columbia.edu with at least 48 hours advance notice. Academic Fellows should reach out to Jessica Copland at jc4218@columbia.edu. A full list of local restaurants that accept letter of credit can be found here: <https://finance-admin.law.columbia.edu/content/meetings-events>
