

Columbia Law School Expense Reimbursement Policy 2025-2026 Academic Year

Meals & Food

The purchase of meals and food should always be done within the parameters of the relevant budget of the individual faculty research allocation, center or program, administrative unit, etc. Provided that there is sufficient budget balance, reimbursements will be issued up to the following amounts upon submission of proper documentation to the Business Office in a timely manner. Contact your budget area supervisor or the Budget Office to determine your budget balance.

- Breakfast: $25 per person
- Lunch: $35 per person
- Dinner: $75 per person

Note: The thresholds above do not include tax or tip, but do include any alcohol.

Please contact the Dean's Office for approval if you are planning an event or gathering that will exceed these amounts, or for larger events that will require coordination. Note the specific exceptions and special cases below. Also note, Grubhub gift vouchers or other virtual meal options are not permitted for employees or students.

Appointments/Recruiting

Meals that are for recruiting and appointment purposes are charged against the recruitment budget. Recruitment Dinners are reimbursed up to $150 per person. This threshold includes alcohol but does not include tax or tip.

Full-time Faculty-Student Lunches

Faculty are encouraged to take students to lunch during the academic year for the purposes of academic enrichment and relationship building. These lunches should not cost more than $35 per person and can be held at Faculty House or at local restaurants. Meals at local restaurants can be charged to the Law School by using a letter of credit available from the Faculty Assistants. For an alternative Faculty-Student Dinner, a $35 per person limit applies. That same $35 per person limit applies to Faculty-Student Events, such as end of semester parties.

Teaching Assistant-Student Lunches

Teaching Assistants may take their students to lunch once during the semester for the purposes of academic enrichment. These lunches are limited to $15 per person. Meals at local restaurants can be charged to the Law School by using a letter of credit available from the Faculty Assistants. Weekly snacks are not reimbursable.

Staff Meetings

Managers should consult with their budget area supervisor for approval if they wish to order food at staff meetings that coincide with meal times, and only if it can be funded by existing unit budget resources.

Dining at Faculty House

During the academic year, vouchers to dine at Faculty House for breakfast or lunch may be obtained by contacting Michelle Ellis at mle35@columbia.edu.
